

Accelerate Wealth from the Inside Out

Day 5 : What Would You Do if You Knew You Could Not Fail?

Congratulations on thinking big and opening to your biggest, best self!

"Our deepest fear is not that we are inadequate. Our deepest fear is that we are powerful beyond measure. It is our light, not our darkness that most frightens us. We ask ourselves, Who am I to be brilliant, gorgeous, talented, fabulous? Actually, who are you not to be? You are a child of God. Your playing small does not serve the world. There is nothing enlightened about shrinking so that other people won't feel insecure around you. We are all meant to shine, as children do. We were born to make manifest the glory of God that is within us. It's not just in some of us; it's in everyone. And as we let our own light shine, we unconsciously give other people permission to do the same. As we are liberated from our own fear, our presence automatically liberates others." Maryanne Williamson

Have your visions expanded?

Are you feeling more confident and sure?

When thinking about playing big and living to your full potential, you will be most effective in the areas of your personal commitment and passion.

When I was about 30, I had a realization. I became aware that I could will myself to be a blessing to my environment. My actions have been guided by this awareness and power. I have been led to the most amazing places, to be with some of the most powerful players in the world.

In 1996 Americans were living in a country where there was still tolerance for the abuse of women and children. At the time, OJ Simpson's trial was making headlines in all the newspapers. The barrage of television coverage on multiple channels was playing out on screen like a reality show. The sheer audacity of the personalities involved with the trial had quickly become the all-American obsession. Given my troubled early life, I felt compelled to take a stand. From a heavy heart, I searched for the good that could come from this fiasco.

The nation was being corralled together like a herd of cattle. From all parts of the nation, we were rounded up and held together in one tightly enclosed holding pen.

We were focusing our awareness on what the lawyers and media skillfully directed our attention to. The trial's fodder was a Petri dish filled with the emotional infection our country had long suffered from. The microscope (television screen) provided ample material with endless hours of spotlight coverage. The media dominated all other areas usually covered by national and international news. More than 80% of news related coverage found some way to reference back to the OJ trial. We were literally forced to look at our social pain as a gaping, infected wound. America was founded on justice; the wound that weakened this great nation was the tolerance of abuse against women and children.

The trial itself was a distraction. It felt like a three ring circus but it did have one very positive thing going for it: the trial of OJ Simpson drew attention of all America to a problem that was in great need of healing. We were a nation in trance. Many of us were ready for a big shift in public policy on this issue. The actions that occurred following the trial reshaped our country and our laws. Today we live in a safer place, a kinder place.

One troubling day, I sat down to my first computer which had been introduced to me by my friend Jacques Lassue. I had not used a keyboard to type since the secretarial classes I had resisted in high school. These are the details of my humble and passionate role in this change. I composed a cover letter and proposal for healing the wounds of our country and the large portion of women who fell into the unrepresented category of survivors at the time. I briefly recounted my days with my three small children spent in a woman's shelter anonymously protected from the violence of my young married life.

With courage and conviction, I mailed the letter and proposal that week. I had to ask around to know how to properly address the letter and get the correct address. President Bill Clinton received my letter within days of my sending it off. Within two weeks, a miracle happened! A green envelope arrived with the return address, 'The White House.'

The contents of the letter I had sent to President Bill Clinton included a three page proposal of actions I felt were necessary for causing change across the country. I was so committed to being a force for change and assisting our nation in healing the wounds of women and children in our society that had been caused by violence and disrespect. To be that force for change meant I must go to the top. I needed to have my voice heard by the person who could change this.

In my EST training, I had learned the communication method of speaking only to the person who had the power to affect change. It was a very valuable life lesson that has served me so well.

I felt the key action steps in my proposal were necessary to affect the change our country so desperately needed. I believed that the President would receive and read my letter. I felt strongly moved to act.

President Bill Clinton had sent me a reply! OMG! He asked me to contact the Congresswoman he had appointed to head the committee. I immediately wrote a nine page proposal and sent it off the next day.

About twelve weeks later, I received a three page letter thanking me for my contribution. They had taken my letter to committee and used virtually all of my ideas! Those ideas ranged from billboards, TV commercials and educational services in schools to recovery and rehabilitation programs.

I saw my vision, in a very real and tangible way, move into America like a wild fire of reform riding on the wave of love!

When you are dreaming big do you immediately come up with all the reasons something might not work?

Do you talk yourself out of your dreams because someone close to you might feel threatened by your bigness?

Are you playing big enough?

Homework

Increase your energy with a fresh gratitude list

a.

b.

c.

d.

e.

Practice the Meditation on your CD, The Definitive Guide to Powerfully Generating Your Abundant Life

Notes to self to chart progress

What I saw during my abundance meditation practice

What I felt

What I realized

What I generated (note any changes or results from your mock-up meditation)

1.

2.

3.

Notice any changes in yourself. Have you become more calm, resolved, deserving, or capable in these past few days?

"He who trims himself to suit everyone will soon whittle himself away."

Raymond Hull

May it be with the blessings of the Supreme Being that whatever happens in this grand 21 day Law of Attraction program be a benefit and a joy for you, your lifestyle and for the ones you love.

May the entire world be filled with health, vitality, abundance, joy and peace.

Amen.

Blessings and light for a day of transformation!
Yahoo!