

Accelerate Wealth from the Inside Out

Day 17: Response-Ability

What you say and how you respond in the midst of a challenging situation will have a great impact on how long you stay in the situation.

What happens to you when you meet with a situation that appears to be foiling your plans for Extreme Abundance?

Do you respond with resistance and complaint?

or

Do you say; "I wonder how this might serve my higher good."?

Do you think, "I know everything has been ordained and planned out for me by my Divine partner, so I know there is good coming from this situation?"

Your response to a bump in the road is a vital force for directing the flow and movement, or lack thereof, towards accomplishing your dreams. Your response dictates how quickly you move into your deepest fulfillment.

Consider: What if nothing that happens to you is a mistake?

- What if you were actively creating endless opportunities to take spiritual steps towards enjoying the divinity and joyous bliss you were meant to experience?
- What if you responded with celebration and happiness over each obstacle, knowing it was bringing you closer to enlightenment and your God state?

True wealth and abundance is yours when you align your heart song with the essence of love, appreciation and gratitude for everything.

You may discover that the very things you thought were obstacles are actually the vehicle for your life's fulfillment.

"The vision process is always self-examination.
It is never, 'God, I want this. Make this happen.'
It is always, 'What do I have to do to become the vision, to live it, to manifest it, to reveal it?'
The visioning process, then, is the process of transformation for an individual."

I think back to the times in my life when I really needed to produce a miracle. These were times of great need. My first evidence of a miracle was the day I collapsed on my living room floor at age twenty-four. At the time, I weighed ninety-six pounds, was the mother of three small children, was recently separated from my husband and was dying from circumstances related to cancer. My marriage was over, but the divorce still lay ahead. It felt like a bomb had gone off in my life and it was spinning out of control. As I went down, my life passed before me. I knew, in my heart, that I was dying. I took stock as I lay on the floor of the living room floor of the little rented duplex. I must admit, I was startled and shocked that life could be over in a matter of hours.

I lay on the floor praying for the strength to get up. I searched my memory for the details of what was important to me in my life and the reasons why I needed a miracle.

My Father had often commented, in a negative way, about my strong willed personality. As I lay on the floor, this strong will and tenacity served me well. I felt unwilling to succumb to my circumstances. I had soul work that was unfinished and I needed to stay. I had to witness my offspring transforming from children into adults. I knew there was more to life than what I had experienced up to that point. I imagined the happiness and joy life had to offer. Feeling myself firmly planted in the newly created image of a long and vibrant life, I began to feel life force flowing through my veins.

I did get up off the floor that day and began a six-month process of restoring my body. I crawled into the kitchen where I had the first food I had eaten in weeks – a bite of Mrs. Grass chicken noodle soup. I started with the first bite and then force-fed myself over the next few weeks. The nutritional component to my recovery eventually became natural and easy for me. Over the next six months, I managed to put on forty-five pounds.

My health challenges were not over but I was committed to recovery.

When creating a miracle, the fuel for this phenomenon is often the potential of an unbearable future or crisis. When the need is great, human beings will fortify their position with as much support as possible. Four fundamentals for fortified, miraculous creation:

Will*Intention*Clarity*Focus

When you are passionate about an outcome, your capacity to magnetize is amplified. There is a real difference between looking for someone to fix you and gathering your resources and support for fortification and regeneration. You are responsible for healing your financial and abundant life. No one outside can fix you; you have to feel the passion in your bones and take the journey. Willingness, intention, clarity and focus create the space where miracles occur. This program is incredible for opening the channels to abundance in all areas. Dynamic shifts occur when you follow the process.
